

QUIT Targa West track days provide perfect testing opportunity

QUIT Targa West organisers are holding two track days at Barbagallo Raceway as part of the preparation for the 2009 tarmac rally held in and around Perth.

The track days, to be held on Thursday 18 June and Thursday 16 July will allow teams an important opportunity to shake down their vehicles in the lead up to the event, which will run from the 20 – 23 August 2009.

Continuing to meet the requirements of the ever-increasing field, the track days will provide teams with the ability to test their vehicle with both driver and co-driver in the car to practice pace-note calling and communication at speed.

“Track days provide competitors with the opportunity to test their vehicles and set up in preparation for the rally,” said QUIT Targa West Event Director Bob Schrader.

“The expense of purchasing individual track days often means individual teams are not in the position to complete this important testing before an event.

“At QUIT Targa West we make it our aim to ensure that all competitors have the best possible event and providing these track days are just one way we hope to provide them with the best experience we can,” Schrader continued.

Along with the opportunity to shake down vehicles, the track days will also provide teams with the opportunity to invite their vehicle sponsors, family and friends along to experience the thrill of tarmac rallying.

To ensure the day is run in a smooth and safe manner, there are only 30 places available for each track day so competitors are urged to contact organisers on info@targawest.com.au if they are interested in taking part.
